

Question set 1: methods and sampling [9]

The first set of questions is always the same, regardless of the stimulus piece. These questions are:

- Identify the method used and outline two characteristics of the method. [3]
- Describe the sampling method used in the study. [3]
- Suggest an alternative or additional research method giving one reason for your choice. [3]

Note: When using an alternative method, you can use questionnaires or surveys as well. Remember that "brain scanning" is not a method in and of itself.

Question set 2: ethics [6]

In the second set of questions, one of the two questions is always asked. You will be asked one of the following questions:

- Describe the ethical considerations that were applied in the study and explain if further ethical considerations could be applied.
OR
- Describe the ethical considerations in reporting the results and explain ethical considerations that could be taken into account when applying the findings of the study.

Note: For the first question of this set, all ethical considerations that were stated in the stimulus should be described. Other considerations that have not been mentioned should be addressed.

Question 3: theoretical understandings

In the third set of questions, one of the following three questions is always asked:

- Discuss the possibility of generalizing the findings of the study. [9]
OR
- Discuss how a researcher could ensure that the results of the study are credible. [9]
OR
- Discuss how the researcher in the study could avoid bias. [9]

Note: When answering any of the above questions, you must make direct reference to the stimulus piece. Blind control can be used to avoid bias.
