This book is divided into three parts. Part I deals with psychology in its relation to the problems involved in the selection and training of a recruit. Part II deals with social psychology and shows how the study of the ways in which individual activity is modified by membership of a group may be brought to bear upon the problems of the maintenance of discipline, the functions of leadership and the development of morale. The third part gives a brief account of some of the mental disorders of warfare and of their treatment, in so far as a knowledge of these matters is necessary and helpful to the ordinary military officer.
